

We took a few kids from our after school program to a Vancouver Giants playoff game. The kids were three boys in grades 2 and 3. We told the boys that they were going to a Giants hockey playoff game. They had never been to a live hockey game before and they're not from Vancouver. For one of the boys, his only association with hockey was the Vancouver Canucks. During the first period of the game, he shouted "Yeah! Come on Canucks!" very excitedly. Many of the fans got a big kick out of it. But even after realizing it wasn't the Canucks we were watching he was still ecstatic to be at a real hockey game, as were the other two boys. It was a very fun night for the boys and for those of us who took them.
